Our members are at the heart of the organisation and we provide the following services and opportunities to support their growth :

who we are

Disability Wales (DW) is the national association of Disabled People's Organisations (DPOs) striving to achieve rights, equality and independent living of disabled people in Wales.

DW promotes the adoption and implementation of the Social Model of Disability, which identifies that it is environmental, organisational, and attitudinal barriers that disable people and prevent their full participation in society not their medical conditions or impairments.

DW is an independent, not for profit organisation established in 1972 that receives grant funding from Welsh Government's Equality Division.

DW is managed by a voluntary Board of Directors drawn from disabled people active in local and national disability organisations across Wales. Most of our staff are disabled people with many years' experience working in both a professional and voluntary capacity for various disability organisations in Wales and beyond.

DW's unique role within Wales is being an umbrella organisation that champions the rights and equality of all disabled people regardless of physical or sensory impairment, learning difficulty or mental health condition. We recognise that many disabled people will have other identities which may result in intersectional discrimination.

DW engages member campaigns, consultations, research and policy development in order to influence the development of government policy and practice in respect of disabled people. We provide information, training and support to members across Wales through social media as well as conferences, seminars and events. DW identifies a strong and thriving network of disabled people's organisations as vital to achieving both effective and innovative national policy and local service delivery.

social model of disability

Disability Wales promotes the adoption and implementation of the Social Model of Disability throughout our work and all staff are expected to develop in-depth knowledge and understanding of how to apply it within their particular field operation.

The Social Model of Disability was developed by disabled people and makes the important difference between ‘impairment’ and ‘disability’, defined as follows:

- Impairment: An injury, illness, or congenital condition that causes or is likely to cause a long-term effect on physical appearance and/or limitation of function within the individual that differs from the commonplace.
- Disability: The loss or limitation of opportunities to take part in society on an equal level with others due to social and environmental barriers.

Disability is shown as being caused by 'barriers' or elements of social organisation which take no or little account of people who have impairments. Society is seen to disable people who have impairments because the way it has been set up prevents us from taking part in everyday life. It follows that if disabled people are to be able to join in mainstream society, then the way society is organised must be changed.

Removing the barriers which exclude (and disable) people who have impairments can bring about this change. There are three main types of barrier facing disabled people:

- Environmental barriers: lack of access in and around the built environment including transport systems
- Attitudinal barriers: where disabled people are regarded as inferior, helpless, weak and vulnerable
- Institutional barriers: policies and procedures that prevent the full participation of disabled people within education, the work place and the wider community

Disability Wales is campaigning and working to remove all disabling barriers in Wales whether environmental, attitudinal or institutional.

employment opportunities

Posts designated as open only to disabled people

The Equality Act (2010) allows disabled people to be treated more favourably than non-disabled people. Furthermore if an employer can show that a particular protected characteristic is central to a particular job, it can insist that only someone who has that particular protected characteristic is suitable for the job. This would be an 'occupational requirement' (www.equalityhumanrights.com).

Through our Board and full membership, DW is an organisation run and controlled by disabled people. Given the barriers that face many disabled people in the workplace, DW seeks to offer employment opportunities to disabled people wherever possible. In some cases following a full review of the vacant post, we decide that it should only be open to a disabled person on the grounds of being an occupational requirement.

These include where the post holder will:

- represent DW as a Disabled People's Organisation to member groups and external bodies advocating our mission, aims and objectives and establishing partnerships and services that seek to implement these, and/or
- work directly with disabled people, both as individuals and through their representative organisations

In order to represent DW credibly in these arenas and develop proposals in line with the Social Model of Disability, it is deemed vital that the post holder is able to approach the role as a disabled person with first-hand experience of disabling barriers who understands how these should be addressed to achieve the rights, equality and independence of disabled people.

Am I a disabled person?

DW's definition of 'disabled person' is one who on account of having a physical and/or sensory impairment, learning difficulty or mental health issue faces barriers due to attitudinal, societal and/or environmental factors.

DW recognises that there are a range of disabling barriers within society that prevent many people from achieving full participation such as in education, employment or living independently in the community. These barriers may be access to the physical environment, information or communication, lack of support and flexibility, or negative attitudes and stereotypes. You may not identify yourself as a disabled person but if you have encountered any of these barriers or others in relation to a long-term health condition, injury or hidden impairment then you are eligible to apply.

Employees work remotely with access to our Spark office base as required.

Equal Opportunities Statement

Disability Wales believes that everyone has the right to be treated with dignity and respect at work. We have adopted an equal opportunities policy which commits the organisation to fair, unbiased and objective employment practices and a work environment which is free of harassment and victimisation. It is the responsibility of every employee to assist the organisation in meeting this commitment.

For this reason, acceptance of and adherence to the organisation's equal opportunities policy form part of every employee's contract of employment.

Access to work

Access to Work is a scheme administered by Job Centre Plus that exists to help disabled employees fulfil their potential at work. It is accessible on a self-referral basis. Access to Work applies to any paid job, part-time or full-time, permanent or temporary.

If an employee has an impairment, disability, health or mental health condition that is likely to last for 12 months or more, Access to Work can give the employee and their employer advice, and support with extra costs which may arise because of specific requirements. For example, Access to Work might pay towards a support worker or equipment needed at work. It can also pay towards the cost of travel to and from work if the employee cannot use public transport.

The money can pay for things like:

- adaptations to the equipment an employee uses
- special equipment
- fares to work if the employee can't use public transport
- a support worker or job coach to help the employee in their workplace
- a support service if the employee has a mental health condition and the employee becomes absent from work or finding it difficult to work
- a communicator at a job interview
- the cost of moving equipment if there is a change in location or job
